FIFTY-NINTH COMMENCEMENT OF ST. John's Academy.—The St. John's boys had their traditional hot night for commencement last evening, and that fact somewhat diminished the attendance, but there was a large nuclience of both Alexandrians and Washingtonians. A little after the appointed hour, a fine orchestra, under the direction of Mr. orchestra, under the direction of Mr.

H. C. Nalls, began the exercises with appropriate music, one of the selections being a triple-tonguing polka on the cornet by Mr. Kennedy, which was executed in very line style. The principal then introduced his youngest cadet, whater Edward K. Vertner of Port.

Master Edward K. Vertner of Port.

Master Edward K. Vertner of Port. Master Edmund K. Vertner, of Port Gibson, Miss., who drew down the house by his admirable rendition of in Paris, each stanza ending with the boast, "Je Sius Americain." The talent of this little fellow as an elocutionist is certainly remarkable and should he cultivated. He was followed by Cadet Percy F. Leach, a son of Dr. Hamilton Leach, of Washington, who recited, in very superior style, Wolsey's speech to Cromwell after his fall. He was continually encored and gave in response to calls first, "The Bald-headed Man," and then "The Bug," two comic pieces which elicited great applause. Mr. Leach is well known in amateur Mr. Leach is well known in amateur dramatic circles in Washington and by Rev. Dr. Packard to Bishop Peterfully sustained his early reputation in af line. Next, Mr. Richard L. Carne, the retiring principal, read his farewell address, a review of the incidents connected with his boyhood in the school and his administration of its affairs for the past forty-five years, concluding with a scathing denunciation of many practices, said to be more prevalent in schools. He was heard with the deep-est attention by the older portion of the audience' and his remarks on the choolboys's ideas of honor were loudly applauded.

Capt. Kosciusko Kemper, as secre-tary of the local committee of the University of Virginia, then presented sen-ior certificates to Cadets Arthur R. Jordan, Texas, and Charles E. Heater, of Loudoun county, in English literature, mathematics, history, geography and geology, and a junior certificate to Cadet John M. Casey, of Lynchburg, in the same studies, and in the absence of Mayor Strauss, who had just received a telegram informing him of the death of his nephew in New York, presented their diplomas of graduation in English studies to Cadets Jordan and Heatenand a school certificate of proficiency er and a school certificate of proficiency in English literature and geology to Calet Leach, and one in history and geography and geology to Cadet Stuart
J. Gass, of Washington. This ceremony was followed by the reading of a student at the Payne Divinity School
